

I support the XM Instant Traffic and Weather reports. When on the road, with such service, I can save time and gas, as well as drive more safely in major cities with this important information ... both the traffic conditions as well as weather reports. I cannot find this information on regular broadcast stations immediately, as is the case with XM, especially with such rapid updates around the clock. Also, I do not know the frequencies of news stations around the country that may periodically have, at most, limited information. The FCC has allowed satellite broadcast of local television channels. Hence, it follows that the FCC should provide the public with satellite radio information, too!!

Thank you,
David M. Pepper.
